RE: An Afrikan Perspective on "Time to Search Ourselves"

Dr. Robinson, Asante Sana for your review of the book The Black Reparations Project: A Handbook for Racial Justice, edited by Darity, Mullen, and Hubbard. Like you, iam of the opinion that gaps exist in the Reparations Movement and Afrikan Unity is at the heart of the soulution to the problem. And, for me, ignorance is the root of our disunity.

For the past twenty-five years i've been a part of the effort to reduce the level of ignorance within the masses of the Afrikan Community about the best "Road to Reparations". From our Spiritual Pilgrimages to the Mississippi Delta; to our Annual Twin Forums on Reparations at Jackson State University; to our Preparations for Reparations Conversations/classes, We have done what We thought was necessary to move Afrikans closer to being ready for Reparations.

Despite our best efforts, the truth of the matter is that the Reparations ignorance that exist within the Afrikan Community is systemic and systematic and deeply imbedded in Afrikans.

And, without an organized and unified effort "a volume that charts a strategic and systematic path to reparations" alone will be insufficient. It might be a good starting point, but so much more in supplemental teaching and materials is needed for the masses to get involved with the Reparations Movement. Without the masses, Reparations is a nightmare for Afrikans. It's a nightmare because it keeps us hoping rather than "Puttin' in Kazi" to bring it into existence by any means necessary.
